PREFACE.

The interest, variety and importance of the early official records of New Jersey have been known in a general way for many years to special students in different fields of historical research. Their extent has made it difficult for any one person to master their contents. The present volume has been compiled with a view to acquainting the people of this State with the character of these early records, and to place at the disposal of students the substance of the contents of the manuscript volumes covering the Colonial period of New Jersey history, or to the surrender of the government to Queen Anne, in 1703.

These records were originally kept by the Secretary of the Colony of New Jersey, at Elizabethtown, the first seat of government. When the Colony was divided into East Jersey and West Jersey, the records of the two Divisions were preserved in their respective capitals—Perth Amboy and Burlington, and there they remained for upwards of a century. By an act passed by the Legislature, November 25, 1790, the seat of government of the State of New Jersey was located at Trenton, and it was provided that the records of conveyances and wills pertaining to government, should be transferred from Burlington and Perth Amboy as soon as proper quarters should be provided for them at the new capital. The records of warrants and surveys were retained in the offices of the Registers of East and West Jersey, respectively, at Perth Amboy and Burlington. The State has made appropriations from time to time for the erection and maintenance of suitable buildings for these latter offices and records.

In the table of contents is given a brief description of the volumes, the records in which are summarized in the following Calendar or Analytical Index, with a general view of the documents in each, and the period covered by them, which may serve as somewhat of a guide to the use of this work.

New Jersey was one of the Proprietary Governments. The grant by Charles Second to his brother, the Duke of York, conveyed not only the soil, but the right of government. In like manner, the title to the soil and the right of government passed from the Duke of York to Sir George Carteret and Lord John Berkeley, and from them to their grantees, in East Jersey and West Jersey respectively. When the right of government was surrendered to the Crown in 1703, the title to the soil so far as undisposed of, remained in the Proprietors. In this volume will be found abstracts of the original grants, concessions, instructions and orders of the first Proprietors and Governors. These records, moreover, describe the circumstances under which the first settlements were made in the Colony, the evolution of the government, the origin of the land titles in the Colony and in the various subdivisions thereof, the origin and characteristics of the first settlers, their occupations, their manners and customs, their early struggles, their failures and their successes, and in general the experiences and environments which welded a most heterogeneous population, with most diverse interests, into a homogeneous commonwealth, compelled by circumstances to be self-reliant, with a feeling of hostility toward outside dictation in their affairs, especially against the Proprietors (largely residents in England and Scotland), and who not only oppressed the settlers by their exactions of quit rents, but who influenced legislation and taxation through their Governors and Councils. Thus the people of New Jersey were educated for a hundred years in the principles of self-government, intensified by a perpetual struggle against the effort to impose upon them taxes for the support of Governors and governments not of their own making. In the following pages can be traced the beginnings of that contest which culminated in New Jersey's Declaration of Independence, on July 2, 1776.

The instructions to the Governors, and the grants and concessions to the first settlers, show how scrupulously careful were the Proprietors to acquire honestly the Indian title to the occupancy of the soil. The numerous Indian deeds, of which abstracts are given, show that the settlers in practice fully conformed to the regulations on the subject. In the index will be found a large number of Indian names of persons and places, from which some idea may be formed as to the extent of the aboriginal occupancy of the soil, the villages, cultivated lands, fisheries, burial places and other localities in which the primitive inhabitants were specially interested. Perhaps the considerable number of these Indian words here given may be of some value to the students of American ethnology and linguistics, especially to those interested in the history of the Lenni Lenâpe.

The development of mines and mining, pottery, lumber, whale fishing and other industries is indicated by various deeds, contracts and other documents, cited in the index under appropriate heads. Under the title "Occupations" will be found a list of the early inhabitants whose avocations are described in deeds, etc. This classification throws an interesting light upon the varied character of the first settlers attracted to New Jersey. It is amusingly indicative of the unsettled social status of the seventeenth century immigrants to find the same person described in one instrument as a "husbandman," in another ss a "carpenter," then as a "gentleman," and again as a "blacksmith" or a "planter." The names given by some to their plantations—"Bacon's Adventure," "Baconsfield," "Bradway's Neck," "Braithwaite's Hall," "Drayton House," "Fenwick's Manor," "Forrest's Grove," "Garrett's Choice," "Guy's Point," "Hancock's Hurst," "Haslefield," "Hedgefield," "Langford's Plantation," "Langstaff's Plain," "Lefevor's Chase," "Moseley's Shield," "Provo's Holt," "Petersfield," "Robinson's Plantation," "Roysefield," "Smithfield," "Smith's Bowery," "Sonmans' Manor," "Tindall's Bowery," "Tinton Manor," "Watson's Ranthrope," "Webb's Arladon," "White's Vineyard," etc., are significant of the brave ambitions of the early adventurers to found great estates in the New World, wherein their own family names would be perpetuated, after the manner of the Mother Country neighborhoods whence they came. The Supplementary Index, giving the names of places in England, Scotland and Ireland where many of the original owners of land in New Jersey resided, and whence most of the first settlers came, shows how wide was the interest of those countries in the new Colony. Nearly half the counties of England are represented in this index.

The interest and importance of this volume to the genealogist will be obvious at a glance. A considerable number of marriage certificates in the early records have been reserved for a separate volume of Marriage Records, to be issued in the series of New Jersey Archives.

The philologist will be interested to find in these pages some unusual words—"pytle," "scotchman," etc., and other common words or phrases used in an archaic sense.

The character of this work has seemed to make it unnecessary to annotate it freely, and hence but few notes have been given.

The Calendar and the General Index have been prepared by Mr. Berthold Fernow, the accomplished archivist of New York. To those acquainted with his work the mention of this fact will be a sufficient guarantee of the thoroughness and accuracy with which this volume has been prepared.

If the Legislature should approve, and make the requisite appropriations, abstracts of the records of the Province to 1776 will be prepared and published uniformly with this volume.

[1] Maryon, or Maryen. This John Campbell was doubtless he who is mentioned as having arrived at Perth Amboy about October, 1684, with his wife, three children and eleven servants. Whitehead assumes that he was a son of Lord Neill Campbell, son of the Marquis and brother to the Earl of Argyle, and who fled to New Jersey to escape bitter persecution in Scotland, remaining here from 1685 until 1687.—Whitehead's Perth Amboy, 22; Whitehead's East Jersey, 169-170. Wodrow, in his "History of the Sufferings," etc., says of Lord Campbell, under date of 1685: "He was forced to go in the Hazard of his Life to America, and leave his Lady and Family behind him."—Vol. II. (folio ed.) p. 549. But John Campbell was not a son of Lord Neill Campbell—though apparently a kinsman. He was one of the East Jersey Proprietors, a member of the Court of Common Right, and a representative in the General Assembly. He died in the summer of 1690, his will being admitted to probate August 2 of that year. His eldest daughter, Ann, married John Stevens, of Amboy, the ancestor of the Hoboken family of that name.—N. Y. Gen. and Biog. Record, XVI., 6-10.

[1] John Smith was born in Norfolkshire, England, 20th of 7th mo. 1623, the son of John Smith. He was a miller, and settled at Roxbury, Nottinghamshire, and in 1658 married Martha Craffs, daughter of Christopher Craffs, of Northamptonshire. In April, 1675, he bought from Fenwick 1,000 acres at Salem, and signed the fundamental articles for the government of the colony, June 28, 1675. He came to America with John Fenwick, in the ship Griffith, in the summer or fall of 1675, accompanied by his wife Martha and four children—Daniel, Edward, David and Sarah.

[2] According to Smith's History, Christopher Saunders was a passenger in the ship Kent, that brought over settlers for Burlington, who arrived at New Castle, Del., 16th of 6th mo. 1677.

[3] That is, Bradway's street, so called after Edwin Bradway. He bought a town lot and 1,000 acres of land in Salem, from Fenwick, in May, 1675, and in June signed the fundamental articles. In 1676 Wharf street was laid out, and a town lot of sixteen acres was surveyed on it for Bradway. He and his wife Mary and three children—Mary, William and Susannah—with three servants, sailed from London in the ship Kent, in 3d mo. 1677, and landed at Salem in 7th mo. In 1691

he built a large brick house, which was still standing in 1876. When the town was incorporated, in 1693, the name of Wharf street was officially changed to Bradway street, but it is evident from the deeds above that it was so called as early as 1679. It is now called Broadway.

[1] William Wilkinson was one of the servants who accompanied Fenwick in 1675.

[2] John Adams was a weaver, from Reading, in Berkshire, who had married John Fenwick's daughter Elizabeth, and came out in the Griffith with her and three children—Elizabeth, Fenwick and Mary. He and John Smith and Edward Champneys were among the signers, 25th of 4th mo. 1676, of the agreement for apportioning and settling the town of New Salem. He had acquired 2,000 acres of land there in 1674, before leaving England. He was a member of the West Jersey House of Representatives for several years. He affixed his mark, June 28, 1675, to the agreement for the government of Fenwick's Colony. His tract was located at Penn's Neck, and is known as Sapaney. His house, built at Ivy Point, near Market street, Salem, stood until about 1825. He and his wife died about 1700, or earlier.

[3] George Deacon was born in London, in 1642 or 1643, son of George Deacon, of a family of Church Waltham, Essex county, England. He was a felt-maker, by occupation, in England. He came to America with his father, his wife Frances, of Dedford, in Kent, and servant, Thomas Edwards, in the ship Willing Mind, arriving November 3, 1677, and settled at New Salem, but soon removed to Alloways Creek, near Hancock's Bridge, Salem county. He was a prominent member of the Society of Friends, and in 1679-80 was of a committee appointed to purchase lands for a meeting house and burial plot. He was frequently a delegate to the Yearly Meetings at Newton and Philadelphia, so late as 1694. He signed the West Jersey Concessions, March 3, 1676-7; was a member of the West Jersey Assembly or House of Representatives, 1682-1685, and again in 1697; was a member of the Provincial Council in 1701, and in 1702 was commissioned a member of Gov. Cornbury's Council, being reappointed with Gov. Lovelace and Gov. Hunter, serving in that body so late as January 26, 1716. He was a Justice of the Peace for Salem many years; was appointed a commissioner for laying out highways, in 1685; was King's attorney in 1696, and in 1701 was a Judge of the courts. He m. 2d, in 1688, Margaret Denn; 3d, in 1692, Susannah, dau. of Robert Ashton, of New Castle, on Delaware; 4th, in 1693, Martha Charles, widow of Simon Charles Farm, of Northampton, Burlington county. He removed to the latter place about 1704. He died in 1725, and was buried in Friends' ground at Burlington.

[4] John Maddox, son of Ralph Maddox, was born in 1638. In 1658 he removed to London, and resided in the parish of St. Sepulchre, following the occupation of a chandler. In 1669 he married Elizabeth, widow of Joseph Durham. They had one daughter, Elizabeth, born in London in 1671, who in 1688 married James Denn. John Maddox bought of Fenwick 1,000 acres of land in Fenwick's Colony, or Salem Tenth, in May, 1675, and on June 28 signed the fundamental articles for the government of the colony. He came over in 1678, accompanied by his wife and daughter, and stepson, Richard Durham, and three servants, arriving at New Salem in 9th month—November. He signed the West Jersey Concessions, March 3, 1676-7. On arriving in Salem he took a somewhat active part in the affairs of the town. In 1679-80 he was on a committee of Friends to secure a meeting house.

[1] Samuel Hedge was the son of Samuel Hedge, a merchant and citizen of London. He came over with Fenwick, in the summer of 1675, and in the following spring married the latter's daughter Ann. Fenwick conveyed to them a tract of 2,000 acres in the 11th mo. of the same year (February, 1677), in Upper Mannington, whither the young couple removed, and where they resided until 1685. It was known as the Hedgefield tract. Hedge signed the West Jersey Concessions, March 3, 1676-7. His father-in-law appointed him Surveyor-General of the Colony, April 30, 1678. He was clerk and recorder of deeds of Salem county, until 1692. As a member of the West Jersey House of Representatives he signed an address to King William III., May 20, 1697, congratulating him on his escape from a reported plot. He was still a member of the House in 1701, when he and other members petitioned the King for the appointment of Andrew Hamilton as Governor of New Jersey. Having been appointed one of his father-in-law's executors, he returned in 1685 to Salem, where he built a brick house on Bradway street, in which he and his wife resided until their death. They had one son, Samuel Hedge 3d, who married Rebecca Pyle; he died 3d of 11th mo. 1708-9, leaving a will, from which it appears that his father was still living. He left a widow and five children, all sons.

[2] John Smith of Smithfield, the son of William Smith, was born in 1645, in Kent, England, and in 1673 married Susannah Marcy, dau. of Edward Marcy. In 1685 he came over with his wife on the Ariel, landing at New Castle in 4th mo. Two months later he bought of Samuel and Ann Hedge 1,000 acres of the Hedgefield tract, at Upper Mannington, and there resided thenceforth, his place being known as Smithfield. He appears to have been a man of unusual business ability, and he must have possessed more than ordinary tact, to win and keep the good will of the irascible Proprietor of Salem Tenth, who in his will, dated August 7, 1683, named him as one of his executors.

[3] Richard Tindall came to America in 1678, and soon after bought from Fenwick 200 acres at Mannington, his place being known as Tindall's Grove. He was appointed Surveyor General of Salem Tenth, in 1680, and was also employed by James Nevill to survey William Penn's lands in the same Colony. He was named as an executor in Fenwick's will, of August 7, 1683.

[1] James Nevill was a weaver, of Stepney, London, but in the West Jersey records is usually styled "gentleman," indicating that he did not follow his trade in this country. He came over with Fenwick, and brought a wife, but apparently no children. He seems to have had a decided taste for the law, and a fondness for writing, which led Fenwick to appoint him Secretary for the Salem Colony, April 30, 1678. He was a magistrate (commissioned Oct. 26, 1679), a conveyancer and scrivener, real estate agent, and a little of everything else. He signed the West Jersey Concessions, March 3, 1676-7. In 1681-4 he was an agent of William Penn, adversely to Fenwick. One of the volumes of Salem Records is filled with miscellaneous memoranda, made by him, of leases, law suits, contracts, etc., etc., of the greatest interest and value to the local historian.

[1] Robert Dimsdale, one of the earliest physicians in West Jersey, bought of William Penn, May 22, 1682, for £25, a tract of 5,000 acres in Pennsylvania. He seems to have been then of Edmondton, Middlesex county, England. He came to America in 1683 with Penn, and located a large tract of land south of Mt. Holly, on both sides of a stream hence known as Dimsdale Run, where he built a large brick house and cleared a farm. Some time prior to 1686 he married, 2d, Sarah, daughter of Francis Collins, who came from the parish of Stepney, Middlesex county, England, and settled in Newton, Gloucester county, in 1682. In 1688 he returned to England, and lived for a while at Theydon Garnon, near Epping, Essex, but in January, 1692-3, he was at Bishop Stortford (a small market town and parish on both sides of the river Stort, formerly crossed by a ford at this place, and which was bestowed by William the Conqueror, soon after the conquest, upon Maurice, Bishop of London, and his successors, whence the name), in the county of Hertford, where he suffered imprisonment for a time, for practising without a license. While in America he published in London, in 1684, a work advertising a number of specifics for the cure of various diseases. He died in England in 1718. His widow soon after returned to this country, and resided at Haddonfield until her death, in 1739.

——— Political Essay on the powers of law courts &c. by James Nevill, ending with:

A Rivers mouth is bigger than its head,
So would the mouth of Pensilvania spred,
Over Superiors, over all his peers,
Over the English, ffinns, Sweads & Min-heres,
Most horrible, monsterous & most Barberous, hee
Renders known & Common law, to be,
His will is, right or wrong, be't plaintife or defendt,
Should have the Cause, if gold be at ye end ont
For Averice & pride, he's not the least
Money's the thing, in th' bears nose, & ring,
Tis that Commands the Beast.

Standing waters will breed corruption & be offensive if it be not some times changed, and for men to be too long in offices of government is to have too litle regard to others or the Dignity of the state. 58

[1] The name John Smith appears to be appended as a signature and not as one of the passengers on the ship. This interesting document is given above in full and as exactly as ordinary typography will admit Some question has been raised as to whether the last three names—Marke Reeve, Edward Webb and Elizabeth Waites—were servants of Edward Champneys, or were additional passengers, and it is pointed out that Marke Reeve almost immediately became the purchaser of extensive tracts of land, which he could hardly have done, if he had come out as a servant. It is also suggested that the second "vizd" is repeated in the sense of "esaid." The reader must judge for himself from the context.
